1. The Main Building of the University of Hong Kong

- The oldest structure of the whole HKU campus
- Built in 1910~1912
- A gift from Sir Hormusjee Naorojee Mody in 1930
- The only structure of the University at that time and it had housed all the departments of the University
- Acted as a temporary hospital during the war
- Declared a monument in 1984

We can learn about the architecture style at that time and things about the wars.

The main building of HKU in 1912 after it has just been finished constructing

2. Western Market

- A four-storey building
- An Edwardian-style building
- Declared a monument in 1990
- Came into business in 1844
- The south block was built in 1858
- The north block was built in 1906

The front view of the western market

Nowadays, western market becomes a famous local tourist attraction in Hong Kong with record-high leasing revenues as well as move-in of household names in the market. It is a good place to go for shopping.

3. Man Mo Temple

- Built in the 1840s
- Acted as a mediation centre for people to solve problems during the early colonial period
- It worships two Gods: the god of Wenwu Wang & the god of GuanYu
- Declared a monument

Tourists are able to taste the traditional Chinese religious culture in this old temple. The decorations, engravings, drawings on the walls are rich in history and culture, and worth-seeing.

The outlook of Man Mo Temple

The inside of this temple. You can see the famous giant incense coils hanging from the ceiling. This is one of the unique characteristics of this temple.

4. Lin Heung Tea House

- Two-storey Chinese building
- It is famous for its authentic and traditional Chinese dim sum, attracting international newspapers coverage
- Founded in Guangzhou in 1889
- Established in 1980

Tourists can come and taste the local and traditional Chinese cuisines.

5. City Gallery

- The first planning and infrastructure gallery in Hong Kong
- Chronicles the development of the territory and a corridor with interactive displays of the Planning Process and information of Land Formation

It shows Hong Kong's major planning proposals and infrastructure projects and also shows us our city's future development look. Tourists can know more about Hong Kong's history and its future developments.

entrance

6. Hong Kong Park

- Preserved a number of garrison buildings established between 1842 and 1910, including:
 - The formerly residence of the Commander-in-Chief of the British Armed Forces (the Flagstaff House Museum of Tea Ware)
 - The Rawlinson House (the Park Management Office and the Cotton Tree Drive Marriage Registry)
 - The Wavell House (the Education Centre)
 - The Cassels Block (the Hong Kong Visual Arts! Centre)

The outlook of the Flagstaff House Museum of Tea Ware

Visitors can know about the building style during the colonial period and know about the condition of living environment of the Foreigners compared to the local Chinese.

The artificial waterfall

7. St. Joseph's College

- Established in 1875
- The first Catholic boys' secondary school in Hong Kong
- The first missionary school in Hong Kong
- It's sponsoring body is the Institute of The Brothers of the Christian Schools
- The west and north blocks of the building are declared monuments and are not open to the public

The inside of the college

The west block of the college

We can know about the educational status of the local Chinese as the schools were built in the mid-levels where the foreigners live and which means Chinese people couldn't receive education during the colonial period.

18:00-19:30

8. SOHO (District)

- An entertainment zone
- There are many bars and clubs
- There is a large variety of restaurants of different food
- Has the longest escalator in the world

A restaurant called
“SOHO SPICE”

The world's longest outdoor escalator from the bird's view

Visitors can entertain themselves here. They can go to the bars and clubs and different restaurants to have local and overseas cuisines. They can also try going up and down the district by the world longest outdoor escalator!

9. The Ferris Wheel

- It takes HKD$100 for a ride
- There are food courts next to the Ferris Wheel so if people are hungry they can go there to eat but the food are expensive

The outlook of the Ferris Wheel during the day with the LED lights off

The outlook of the Ferris Wheel at the night, note the LED lights on the support frames and the monitor in the center

Its feature is the lights at night. It has installed LED lights on the support frames and there is a monitor on both sides of the Ferris Wheel showing images and advertisements electrical images on the Ferris Wheel. So that's why there are much more people going there at night.

Reflections

Yeung Cheuk Hei Michael:

- After doing this project, I learned a lot of things about the Central and Western district like the Ferris Wheel, western market etc. I live in New Territories, I seldom goes to Hong Kong Island during Holiday, but after doing this project, it gives me a lot of information about the Central and Western District.

I think doing a project needs a lot of teamwork and need to choose some right people but not to choose the 'free riders'. For this time, I think my team is ok although there is a lot to improve. I hope that our teamwork will be better than this time in the future.

Reflections

Cheng Yu Tak Alexander:

- Through conducting the project, I learn more about C&W district as well as my own culture as a Chinese although I live in the East district. I was responsible for making the part of Man Mo Temple, which is a traditional temple with a long history which makes me understand my own culture. I also learnt the importance of cooperation, every group member has to be serious on the project, if no, we cannot do the project properly.

Chan Cheuk Ka:

- This project has indirectly encouraged me to learn more about history of Hong Kong. Before this, I hated history very much and I thought that history is boring and silly, however, I found it fun and interesting during this project, and I think this might have helped me a lot to learn history. On the other hand, I understood the importance of co-operation within group mates, without the co-operation, we could not reach a consensus and we could not finish this project so smoothly and of course it will end up being a mess.

Reflections

Chan Hoi Chun Hugo:

- I think the project can let us learn more about the history of Central and Western District. It is a remarkable project that I ever have and the topic is out of ordinary. Just like my part about Western Market and Lin Heung tea house. They have witness Hong Kong Island's develop. I am the one of the "Kowlooners" and that makes me more familiar with the culture and lifestyle in HK Island or even the Hong Kong history in the late 19 century to early 20 century, too. Last but not least, from this project, we need to have team spirit and try our best to do all our work.

Chu Chun Fung Isaac:

- After finishing this project, I have learnt that the importance of cooperation with other team members within the group. If we don't coordinate with each other, the project will never finish. However, we have difficulties in gathering all of us for a project meeting. But finally we can hold a meeting with all group members present. Besides, the choices of visiting places in the Central and Western District are also difficult things as there are a lot of good places to investigate. At last, we use a very 'fair' method- voting by each team member to decide where to go.

Reflections

Fong Kee Lok Jason:

- I think we have done this project with flying colours because we have good-timing and we have divided the work equally so everyone gets something to do. However, we have some difficulties such as gathering together and discuss with each other. Luckily we sort out this problem with discussing important details and comments in our chat group. Although I think it is better for us to go to the scenic spots in person more, we still did a great job.
